It was a dark, cold evening on the 5th November. Tom and his family put on their hats, scarves and gloves.

His dad carefully lit one for him and showed him how to hold it safely.

They all set off from their house towards the park.

When it had gone out, his dad showed him how to put it in a bucket of cold water.

Then the fireworks started to go off.

There were lots of fireworks in the sky at once.

A man from the park lit the bonfire.

There was already a crowd standing around the unlit bonfire.

As the fire was burning, it reached far up towards the sky.

Tom asked his dad if he could buy a packet of sparklers from the stall.

The last firework was a Catherine Wheel. It was Tom's favourite.

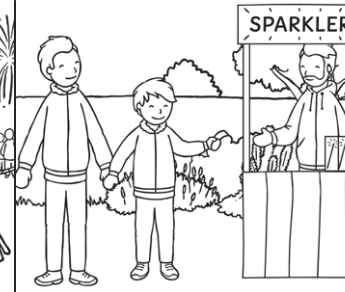

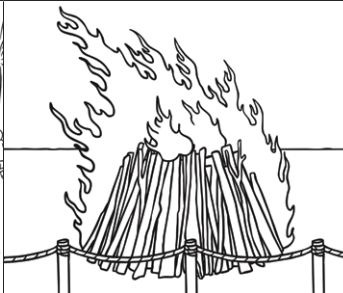

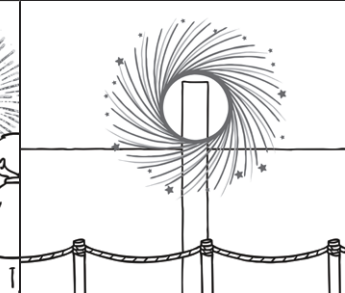

Then they went back home. They were glad to get warm.
